Book Drive for Lakeland Correctional Facility

The African Studies Center has begun a new outreach program at Lakeland Correctional Facility in Coldwater, Michigan. As part of our programming there for Black History Month, the African Studies Center is collecting books to be donated to their library.

If you have duplicates or unused copies of books on African History, African-American History, African Diaspora History and African languages, please bring them to the African Studies Center or contact us for pickup at chotid@msu.edu.

Navigating the Challenges of Your Next Step

Akosua Boadi-Agyemang

March 27th, 2020
4:30 - 6:00 PM
Erickson Kiva, Room 103

Commonly known on the LinkedIn platform as "The Bold Journey girl" and for sharing her stories on going from rejection to working fulltime for Microsoft, Akosua Boadi-Agyemang boldly radiates her light as a Program Manager for Microsoft’s Business and Sales Operations. Akosua was born and raised in Francistown, Botswana to two Ghanaian parents. She moved to Oxford, Ohio to seek higher education at Miami University. Upon arriving in the US in 2015, Akosua started an initiative called “Re-Envision Africa” to highlight the whole story of Africa and not just the usually told single narrative of poverty, war and famine. Akosua hopes that through Re-Envision Africa, more people will come to understand that there is education, wealth, innovation and beauty etc. that comes from the Continent.

Academic Ethics Across Cultures Workshop

Date: Friday, February 28th
Time: 12:00 pm – 1:30 pm
Location: International Center Room 201

Presenters:
- Opal Leeman Bartzis, Executive Director of Education Abroad at Michigan State University
- Anne Hayner, Associate Director for Alumni Relations, Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies at the University of Notre Dame

Description:
Learn how culture influences understandings of academic ethics, and how to train international and education abroad students, faculty, and staff to prevent crises.

This session examines issues of academic integrity in cross-cultural contexts. Students traveling across cultures may encounter different cultural definitions of cheating and plagiarism -- what is considered "sharing" in a collectivist culture may be considered "cheating" in an individualist culture. International students may find themselves grappling not only with new educational systems but also differing perspectives on nuanced issues of academic ethics which often include more grey areas and cultural assumptions than commonly acknowledged. Similar challenges are often encountered by US students who study abroad, and students traveling in both directions can find themselves unwittingly breaching academic codes of conduct or social norms regarding academic ethics.

Registration for the workshop is required at https://msu.co1.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_bvbKNIhxZTfnK5qR

The Lilly Fellows Program Applications

The program is intended to advance the University’s continuing efforts to support excellence in teaching and learning. The program supports a cohort of six faculty or academic specialists at all ranks with at least five years of service to the institution. The Program also provides an opportunity for Fellows to expand relationships and collaborative engagement with peers and colleagues within their own colleges and across the University. The program is supported by matching grants from AAN and the Fellows’ departments and/or colleges.

The project should have a work plan that can be reasonably addressed within an academic year, although the implementation and impact of the project is expected to continue beyond the year. We encourage creative and innovative ideas. Using the proposed project as a foundation, participants will also learn leadership concepts and models, build specific skills, learn more about how the University works, and practice what they learn through the activities of their project and small group mentoring and coaching.

Former Lilly Fellows are eligible for this new version of the program.

Submit an application through https://msu.co1.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_2sL2Le3vdBaGfWJ by April 1st, 2020
